

"The Operational and Policy Implications of Iranian Strategic Culture and Doctrine"

Mr. Michael Eisenstadt

The Washington Institute for Near East Policy

This is the fourth lecture in a series being hosted by Middle East Studies at Marine Corps University entitled "Framing the Iranian Challenge".

Michael Eisenstadt is a senior fellow and director of The Washington Institute's Military and Security Studies Program. A specialist in Persian Gulf and Arab-Israeli security affairs, he has published widely on the armed forces, irregular and conventional warfare, and nuclear weapons proliferation of the Middle East. Prior to joining the Institute in 1989, Mr. Eisenstadt worked as a military analyst with the U.S. government. Mr. Eisenstadt served for twenty-six years as an officer in the U.S. Army Reserve before retiring with the rank of lieutenant colonel in 2010. His military service included active-duty tours in Iraq, Jerusalem, the West Bank, Jordan and Turkey. He has also served in a civilian capacity on the Multinational Force-Iraq/U.S. Embassy Baghdad Joint Campaign Plan Assessment Team; and as an advisor or consultant to the congressionally mandated Iraq Study Group, the National Academies Committee on Defeating IEDs, the Multinational Corps-Iraq Information Operations Task Force, and the State Department's Future of Iraq defense policy working group. He also worked on the 1992 U.S. Air Force Gulf War Air Power Survey. Mr. Eisenstadt earned an MA in Arab Studies from Georgetown University and has traveled widely in the Middle East.
